He Goes Too Far

ALDERMAN Michael Griffin is stretching imagination unduly in suggesting that the Municipal Act in its present form endangers the democratic process by making it possible for 1,000 persons to buy jointly a small piece of property in the city for $1 each and then swing a civic election by voting as a bloc.

This is indeed an arresting illustration of a flaw in the act, which sets no minimum value on the property one must own to be an owner-elector. But how serious is the flaw, in terms of abuse of the election system and in a practical sense?

The opportunity to swing an election of mayor and aldermen exists with or without the flaw, and without the necessity of persuading anyone to invest a dollar in property. All it takes is the organizaonly be residents or occupiers of rented property. not necessarily property-owners-to do the job. The most ambitious candidates have often found this task beyond them.

So when Alderman Griffin suggests that "any organization, including political parties, could take over city hall," he is right regardless of the flaw, but over-fearful. City hall has not been taken over yet by an organized group, and it does not seem likely to be.

It would have been more to the point if the alderman had confined his fears to the possibility of a group conspiring in the way he suggested to pass or defeat a money bylaw, since only property-owners can vote on money bylaws. But here again, the concerted action would have to be organized well in artivance of a money bylaw coming to a vote, so that the bloc of $1 "property-owners" would be on the voters' list: a difficult task to say the least. Nor does it seem likely that a thousand persons could be registered as owners of one small piece of property without exposure of their conspiracy.

Alderman Griffin nevertheless has done the citizens a service in calling attention to the fact that the law allows the man with the smallest property-holding one vote and the man with the largest one vote, so that in the recent parking bylaw election, for instance, eight joint owners of a $7,500 property had eight and the T Eaton Company with property worth $1.125,000 had one vote.

His suggestion that there should be only one vote for one piece of property in general elections hardly will find favor. It would deprive thousands of citizens of their, franchise.

But his proposal that votes he geared to property values in money bylaw balloting such as the parking election could well be considered by the Union of British Columbia Municipalities and the provincial government

There is danger in this proposal: danger that one big industry or one big property-owner could exert control over development of a whole town, and with such control could drive political bargains. But safeguards possibly could be devised, and the proposal merits the attention Alderman Griffin has gained

A Solid Front

THIN-SKINNED party purists on both sides of the House will doubtless take grave offence in the action of Prime Minister Diefenbaker and Opposition Leader Pearson in meeting together to seek unanimity of approach to the current explosive international situation.

However, the conference will have the general approval of the majority of Canadians regardless of political hue, and should give heart to many who nourish the suspicion that picayune partisan rivairies might tend to overfule the desires of both major parties to choose the course best for the country at

Certainly neither party leader will lose stature nor weaken his cause by following such a course when matters of emergency threaten the nation. Rather they demonstrate to their fellow Canadians and their fellow citizens of the world alike that in times of stress Canada is ready and able to present a solid front backed by the united support of its people as

This national political summit meeting could well he taken as an example by other nations in the Western Alliance-particularly by our neighbors to the south-whose vacillating policies and oft-times minority-supported moves in international politics have resulted in near disaster in such widely separated fields of operation as Cuba and Laos

Both Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Pearson should be congratulated for openly proclaiming that their concern for the security of our nation takes precedence over all other considerations.

For Shame, Mr. Freed

A MATEUR sportsmen throughout the world can hardly fail to be mildly amused at the squawk of David Freed, the U.S. Davis Cup tennis team captain, that this year the U.S. is putting schoolboys against professionals.

Saying that the U.S. puts education and work above a mere game while players from other countries are going round the world playing tennis on expense accounts. Mr. Freed is voicing precisely the same complaint as other countries for many years have used against some so-called U.S. amateurs.

Apart from perhaps Russia, where sportsmen though classified as amateurs are actually wards of the state, no other country has done more to subsidize the top flight amateur sportsman than the U.S.

Colleges and universities in the U.S. have made no secret of giving bursaries and scholarships to youngsters purely on their athletic prowess, and then have developed them with superb coaching-in many cases to the exclusion of their studies—so that they have become world masters of their specialty Golfers, banketball players, track and field performers have for years also been able to obtain and hold highly paid jobs on their sporting ability alone, and if this is not the sort of quasi-professionalism about which Mr. Freed is now complaining, it is indeed hard to discern the difference.

The truth is that the Australians and some others have temporarily, at least, outdone the United States both in talent, training and preparation for the Davis Cup and other world tennis competitions.

Mr. Freed who is threatening to abandon his job hecause of the adversity in which he finds himself should know that the rest amateur ought to he able to take defeat with the same good grace as he accepta victory. -

Garden Notes

Battles Over Peonies

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

With peony planting time just around, the corner, my wife and I have been having some ding-dong battles as to whether we should buy and plant some more roots this fall, We have ten plants in the garden now and Agnes is all for doubling this number-in fact, she has a list of varieties she wants to order, varieties which were noted and admired at the flower shows and in public parks last

I would be the first to agree that the peony is a grand plant and I must admit it is practically indestructible. Weather has no terrors for it, insects never seem to attack it and about the only disease it gets is botrylis, which rots or dries up the immature flower buds but never kills the plant. My reluctance to plant more peoples stems from their very brief period of bloom, for the best of them remain flower for only ten days to two weeks.

I feel that we have more than enough June-blooming flowers in the garden now and we should be concentrating on the problem of getting more mid- and late-summer color in peony is a beast of a plant to stake you have to use a wire hoop gadget to keep the foliage from flopping all the place. As usual with our domestic arguments, we arrived at a compromise. The peony order has been sent off in the mail with a cheque to cover and the roots should be arriving, toward the end of the month—the best time of the year to plant peonies. Here are the varieties we ordered LADY ALEXANDRA DUFF nott French pink flower with flesh tints and a strong grower, with stiffer and more upright stems than most peonies. Blooms about the middle of the peony season, $1.

ANA GRAY -- Large., compact, beautifully rounded flowers in a m unusual color, pale lilac sprinkled with darker lilac spots. Very fragrant.

FELIX CROUSSE About the bitchieur fed I have ever seen in a peony, with large globular flowers and delicately scented ablooming somewhat later than me to pro-GRANDIFLORA - An 80 year old variety pink with a silvery sheen to the petals and highly fragrant. Very late in coming into bloom, thereby extending the prony mason $1.

KARL ROSENFELD The darkest of the crimson pennies, a strong grower and free bloomer—we counted t moons on one single plant. Unfortunately, it has no scent at all. $1.

RARONESS SCHROEDER - The flowers are very large and a bit on the shaggy side. Opening a pinky white but turning to cream as the flowers age. I am told the Baroness will outlast any other peony as a cut flower in water. Very fragrant. $1.

THERESE A very large rose-The color is a beautiful off pink, glussy to the outside of the petals. The plant is strong and erect, requiring, no staking, and is reputed to have some resistance to the botry its disease. $1.

"SOLANGE -- We have this one already but Agnes demands at least two mure plants of it. The color is fund to describe the petals are a waxy white but diffused with a reddish golden light, rather like the sun chining on the underside of a white cloud at sunset. It is not too prolific -I think four blooms to the plant is shout the-best we have had and the scent is barely discernable. $1,

The Other Side of Death (4)

By Allen Spraggett

Can the dead contact the living? Here is a case history, from personal knowledge which may throw light on this provocative question.

Mr. L. J. is a successful business man, middle aged, who served as an officer in the free Polish forces dur-ing World War II. He has a restless, probing mind with a sceptical bent. He calls himself an atheist.

However, five years ago Mr. L. J. had an experience he cannot con-vincingly explain within the framework of his atheism. This is how he told the story:

"My father was a retired colonel in the Polish army—a brave, intelligent, self-reliant man. He had no faith in spiritual realities; all his life I think he wanted to believe but he couldn't. He was looking for proof and he never found it.

"One night the two of us were discussing the possibility of life after death: Neither of us believed in it but my father saidly
"Let's make an agreement.
Whichever of us dies first and that will probably be me if there is survival, let him try to contact the other aomehow and let him know."

"I laughed and I femember say-

"Well, dad, if you do ever come back make certain I know it is you and not some old woman. Don't give any ghostly raps-give some of your good hard thumps."
"We both laughed and then shook

on the agreement

"Six months later my father died suddenly from a heart attack. The night of his funeral, while I was getting ready for bed, I remembered our conversation about life after death, and our agreement

*I mentioned it to my wife. She told me not to talk about such spooky stuff and to come to bed.

Then it happened. Three loud bangs on the roof, just as if someone was up there pounding with a sledge hammer. My wife's hair practically stood on end.

"Almost involuntarily, I said: " Is that you, Dad?"
"With that, the door leading from the bedroom into the halls slammed shut with tremendous force. "Then the knocks came again, one-two-three, louder even than be-fore I went outside and looked up on the roof from the ground. No one was there. Then my wife and I heard distinct footfalls crunching in the gravel driveway. They did sound like my father's heavy steps. There was no one in the driveway but our old dog stood wagging his tail as though he were seeing someone familiar.

"These disturbances continued, off and on, for three weeks. Then they

"What do they indicate? That my father is still alive and he was trying to keep his word and let me know? Perhaps. I'd like to believe. But, really, who knows..."

Dr. S. Ralph Harlow. philosophy professor at Smith College, observes in a recent book that many persons may have experienced contacts from the dead unawares. He suggests that certain peculiar, unex-plained happenings which take place shortly after the death of a loved one or friend may be attempted contacts from the "other side."

* * * These comments of Dr. Harlow led me to reconsider an experience of ours. My mother died 18 months ago, After her death I thought a great deal about her, and about the possibility of a contact from her. One morning, while dressing (this was about two weeks after my mother's death) I took my belt out of the closet and found it astonish-ingly tangled in a series of almost unticable knots. It took me several dedicated minutes to untangle it. The next morning the belt was similarly tangled only worse. Try as I might, I could not untie the knots, Exasper-ated, I complained to my wife.

. . . Half-seriously, lny wife laid: "Maybe it wasn't anybody on earth - It's just like something your mother would do as a joke."

If my wife was not playing practical jokes on me (and she swears she wasn't and I believe her) then something queer was going on.

Next time we will probe further this penetrating question of survival. Can we go beyond evidence to proof? (Telegram News Service)

Public Antipathy To Authority At Highest Point

HALIFAX (CP)—Deputy, Commissioner George McClellan of the RCMP said yesterday there is more antipathy to authority in Canada now "than we have ever seen-before."

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police, the deputy commissioner said discrepect for authority and discripline are symptoms that in history have always appeared "when civilization was on the way down the drain."

He said some sections of the press give the impression that law is a threat to the public. It is a threat to the public. Citizens served by the police also had a responsibility to the police.

"Frankly I think it is the only solution for business firms to refuse to give anything to those agencies not in the Chest," said Mr. Stephen.

"As long as certain groups continue on their own we in the city will be burdened by a multiplicity of appeals."

Panel moderator Dick Baiay wholeheartedly agreed with Mr. Stephen.

Cother members of the panel were Mrs. Phyllis Gravely, head of the YWCA, and David Woodworth, executive director of the Family and Children's Service.

The discussion took the form of a question and answer debate at the regular meeting of the Rotary Club.

RENSCRISC

Soft Life Has Ended

OTTAWA (UPI)-External Affairs Minister Howard Green yesterday accused the Soviet Union of pushing the world to "the brink of nuclear war."

Opening a Commons foreign affairs debate, Green lashed out at Soviet leaders for their actions on Berlin and nuclear testing and for ignoring the Kennedy administration's "genuine" desire to reduce world tensions, which he said was "the greatest tragedy of 1961."

At the same time, he called on Canadians and others in the free world for the courage and sacrifice necessary to pull through the present situation.

"The road ahead will be a hard one," he said, "but maybe we've had a soft life for too long anyway."

Green said the present situation was "one of deep crisis."

Soviet threats over Berlin have produced a steady increase in world tensions, he said, while the Russian decision to resume nuclear testing "profoundly shocked" nations around the globe.

The main hope, he said, was that Communist leaders would react to world opinion, particularly at the forthcoming to limit the same of the same

In air mail letters to President John F. Kennedy, Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and Premier Nikita Khrushchev, David said "You have already enjoyed the prime of your life. Why can't you allow us to enjoy our young lives without the fear of radioactivity and the threat of war hanging over our heads?"

"When you were young," the letter said, "you did not have the worry of how long your life would last and when the bomb, which could wipe out your family civilization-would drop.

"The cold war and its tension is driving the next generation of grown-ups to slow insanity. No person can live and enjoy life if you don't know how long it's going to last."

Fish-Versus-Power Battle Building Up

VANCOUVER (CP)-A fishversus-power struggle is building up over the B.C. Power Commission's plans to build a 20,000-horsepower dam on the Fulton River in the Northern Babine Lake region. The Fisheries Association of B.C. asid Thursday it would fight the proposed $10,000,000 hydro development which would serve the Hazelton, Smithers, flouston and Burnos and Radio associates and resumed their usually snappy delivery after making their point quite clear. a 20,000-horsepower dam on
